PET is recyclable

Highly recyclable, PET or PETE (polyethylene terephthalate) is a plastic resin and a form of polyester. Polyethylene terephthalate is a polymer created by the combination of two monomers: modified ethylene glycol and purified terephthalic acid. Labeled with the #1 code on or near the bottom of bottles and containers, PET is frequently employed to package a range of products including beverages, peanut butter, bakery goods, produce, frozen foods, salad dressings, cosmetics, and household cleaners. Prized for its strength, thermostability, and transparency, PET is a popular choice for packaging. PET also is inexpensive, lightweight, resealable, shatter-resistant and recyclable. Recycled polyethylene terephthalate is known as RPET, and it is the most widely recycled plastic in the world. According to PETRA, the PET Resin Association, the U.S. recycling rate is about 30%, while it is 52% in the European Union. Almost 1.8 billion pounds of PET were recycled in 2015, used to make a variety of end products.

According to the National Association for PET Container Resources (NAPCOR), 5,764 million pounds of PET bottles and jars were available for recycling in 2013. About 85% of those bottles are used for food and beverages, or 4,899 million pounds. NAPCOR reported that 369 million pounds of recycled PET bottles were used in 2013 to make new food and beverage bottles. CRI used this information to calculate the national average recycled content for PET for food and beverage containers:

369 million pounds of recycled PET (rPET) content was reused for food and beverage containers in 2013. Therefore, $369/4,899 = 7.5\%$ maximum post-consumer recycled content for food and beverage containers 2013 in the U.S. NAPCOR notes that end-use data "reflected rPET consumption by converters in both the US. and Canada," so the actual recycled content number is lower than 7.5% to an unknown extent.

According to the National Association for PET Container Resources (NAPCOR), 5,764 million pounds of PET bottles were available for recycling in 2013. About 85% of those bottles are used for food and beverages, or 4,899 million pounds. NAPCOR reported that 369 million pounds of recycled PET bottles were used in 2013 to make new food and beverage bottles. CRI used this information to calculate the national average recycled content for PET for food and beverage containers:

369 million pounds of recycled PET (rPET) content was reused for food and beverage containers in 2013. Therefore, $369/4,899 = 7.5\%$ maximum post-consumer recycled content for food and beverage containers 2013 in the U.S. NAPCOR notes that end-use data "reflected rPET consumption by converters in both the US. and Canada," so the actual recycled content number is lower than 7.5% to an unknown extent.
